FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

[City, State] – [Date] – In a bold step into the future of digital entertainment, VibeScript Studios, a new-age content house, officially announced its launch today. With a vision to blend cinematic depth with platform-native storytelling, the studio aims to deliver culturally rich, emotionally compelling narratives for streaming platforms, podcasts, and immersive media formats.

Founded by a team of filmmakers, screenwriters, and digital media strategists, VibeScript Studios is positioned to cater to an audience that values character-driven, diverse, and genre-fluid storytelling. At launch, the studio revealed an ambitious content slate featuring original series, experimental short films, and multilingual collaborations with regional talent.

“VibeScript isn’t here to follow the algorithm—it’s here to tell stories that stick,” said [Spokesperson Name], Creative Director at VibeScript Studios. “We’re building stories that travel across formats, languages, and emotional landscapes.”

Key initiatives include:

- A three-series original lineup tailored for OTT platforms
- Strategic tie-ups with music labels for integrated storytelling
- A writers' lab to mentor new talent in screenwriting and digital fiction
- A podcast storytelling division set to launch later this year

VibeScript Studios will operate out of Mumbai and Bengaluru, with plans to expand to Southeast Asian markets in 2026. The studio also plans to launch a virtual writers' room and a community-based storytelling accelerator.

Audiences today crave truth, texture, and storytelling that respects their intelligence,” said Neha Rana, Head of Content Strategy. “We’re focused on narratives that feel lived in—not manufactured—and on formats that meet people where they are, whether it’s a 2-hour binge or a 2-minute scroll.”

The company also plans to explore emerging tech formats, including interactive storytelling, AR content, and immersive transmedia campaigns for digital brands looking to deepen engagement through narrative.
